Lisa Johansen, a Social Studies Teacher at Coventry High School, was recently recognized as Coventry Public Schools' Teacher of the Year. Lisa will represent Coventry as their nomination for the 2017-2018 RI Teacher of the Year. She has been an educator in Coventry for 27 years. Prior to teaching at CHS, Johansen spent several years at ASFMS. In 2012, she was the CHS Teacher of the Year as well as the Rhode Island History Teacher of the Year. Coventry Superintendent Craig Levis said of Johansen: "I am so impressed with the high standards that all of our educators exhibit in their practice and craftsmanship. But what I am most proud of is the passion for improving the quality of life for each and every student that is the foundation of our educational community. I truly believe Lisa exemplifies the skills and qualities that live within so many of us she truly represents."
